

SUBSTITUTE SPECIFICATION

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In a method and system for enhancement of an input document data stream which comprises at least one input format file comprising format definitions and an input document data file structured in at least one of ranges and sub-ranges and containing variable data, the data stream is enhanced with finishing commands. In a control file, defining level structures that correspond to at least one of the ranges and sub-ranges of the input document data file. In a control file, associating the finishing commands with levels. Using the control file, the input format file and the input document data file the following are automatically generated by a computer program module.

- a) an output format file that contains the finishing commands in callable groups, and
- b) an output document data file containing the variable data and group calls associated by at least one of range-by-range and sub-range-by-sub-range.